NEW Dressage Association Statement of Animal Welfare:

NEWDA strongly recommends that schoolings shows adopt a statement of animal welfare. The welfare of the horse must be paramount. As per USEF rule GR839, cruelty to or the abuse of a horse is forbidden. The following acts are examples of cruelty:

1. Excessive use of a whip, spurs and/or bit on any horse.
2. Except in emergency situations, any striking of a horse in front of the shoulder with the whip shall be deemed excessive as shall hitting a horse more than three times for any one incident.
3. Showing a horse with raw or bleeding sores around the coronets, pasterns or legs.
4. Riding an exhausted horse or excessive pressing of a tired horse.
5. Riding an obviously lame horse.
6. Inhumane treatment of a horse.

Outlined below you will find the USDF Statement of Animal Welfare (also found on www.usdf.org):

USDF Statement on Animal Welfare

The United States Dressage Federation, Inc. (USDF), a federation of over 125 independent organizations throughout the United States with a membership in excess of 33,000 members, supports the concept of ethical treatment of animals.

Dressage is a classical method of training horses, based upon the horse's natural responses, as carried out in a gradual, planned program during which the horse's athletic abilities are improved in a systematic manner. As a result, the horse becomes capable, comfortable, and responsive in partnership with the rider without the use of force. Dressage competition at various levels of achievement is the ultimate test of the training program to determine whether the desired harmony between horse and rider has been achieved.

The rules pertaining to dressage competition prohibit the use of artificial appliances, training aids, and drugs, which would force the horse to submit. Instead, the emphasis is upon training and a cooperative partnership with the rider. Major competitions are carefully monitored to assure that there is no unnecessary force or harshness displayed.

Unlike other horse sports in which horses enter training at a relatively immature state, dressage training is usually not seriously begun until the horse is three or four. The top levels of achievement require five or more years of progressive training and it is not unusual to see horses in international competition in their late teens. This, in itself, places a premium on good care and soundness throughout the horse's life.

While supporting the concept of animal welfare in its broadest form, the United States Dressage Federation, Inc., also recognizes that it is unrealistic to ascribe human emotions and responses to the horse which in its wild state is a creature of flight, living a hard and precarious existence. Under domestication, the horse is assured of ample food, water, and shelter, as well as protection against infectious diseases and damaging parasites, thus leading a longer and healthier life with a high rate of survival.

As an educational organization, USDF has numerous programs, which teach people how to pursue the accepted, humane training methods. A program of certifying instructors also emphasizes protecting the horse's welfare in pursuit of dressage training.

In addition, the United States Dressage Federation does not approve of training techniques such as hyperflexion, especially when taken to an extreme. While we recognize that we cannot control how riders train at home, excessive techniques should not be tolerated at competitions. The Humane Society of the United States believes that the humane treatment and training of all horses — whether they are high-level competition horses or companion animals — should be of paramount importance to the rider, trainer, discipline and industry. The HSUS has long advocated for the use of humane training techniques and has actively worked to end cruel training methods.

NEW Dressage Association will:

- A. List the show in the Events Calendar on the NEWDA website;
- B. Recognize scores earned at a NEWDA Recognized Schooling Show for NEWDA members for computation of NEWDA year-end awards.
